- Showmanship: How the contestant projects her personality to the audience from horseback

At the start of the contest, the contestants will be evaluated at the walk, trot and lope in both directions. At the completion of the rail portion, contestants will line up in the center, and wait for the judge to acknowledge them. Once acknowledged, contestants should dismount, present their bit, and introduce themselves to the judges. Horse and rider will then be evaluated for appearance. During this time, judges may ask questions about equipment or horse science. Riders will mount their horses and exit the arena once all contestants have been acknowledged. Horsemanship pattern to be completed based on the number drawn at check in.

Contestants will then swap horses based on the numbers drawn at check in and repeat the pattern on their draw horse. Riders will have 10 minutes to swap tack and get to know their new animal before completing the horsemanship pattern again on their draw horse.

SCORING AND JUDGING

The Gilroy Rodeo Royalty Committee will use the following procedures for judging:

- Judges are selected for their experience and qualifications
 - There will be three judges used for Day 1 of the contest and a different set of 3 judges used for Day 2 each with their own qualifications in the areas of community, horsemanship or rodeo lifestyle knowledge.
- Decisions of the judges are final. All judges notes will be made in pen.
- In the event of a category tie, the judges will make the decision to break the tie based on their notes. However, no points will be added or subtracted from a contestant's score.
- In the event of a tie for the title of Miss Gilroy Rodeo, the pageant judges will make the decision. Again, no points will be added or subtracted from any contestant's scores in any part of the competition.
- The head judge will collect the judging sheets and put them into an envelope, seal and sign the envelope. The sealed envelope will be delivered to the Miss Gilroy Rodeo announcers.
- Appearance and personality points are included within each category
- Each portion of the contest will have 100 points allocated to the total score.
 - At the conclusion of each category, the 3 judges scores will be averaged to receive a final score out of 100
 - Example: Judge 1 score: 90, Judge 2 score: 80, Judge 3 score: 85, the contestant will receive a final score of 85 for that category
 - Then, these individual category scores will be summed to receive a total score out of 500
 - The woman with the highest number of points out of 500 will receive the title of Miss Gilroy Rodeo
 - The contestants will receive deductions for failure to follow the guidelines in this manual.
